Ivan Bunin in 1893 himself fell under strong influence of Lev Tolstoy's ideas and later described himself as 'a Tolstoyan'. The story has never appeared in a magazine. It was rejected by Alexander Skabichevsky of Novoye Slovo who (in a letter dated August 27, 1896) suggested the story was 'too feullieton-like': ",here are just several freaks, and a Tolstovian, well above them," he wrote. Bunin ...
